POWERLUNCH • SEPTEMBER 30

The ability to form the right relationships in the workplace is critical to our financial success as well as to our level of influence in our community. But building those relationships isn't easy to do. Competing goals, political alliances, the nature of dog-eat-dog business, and the lack of authenticity impede our ability to develop healthy relationships at work. Yet develop them we must. Let's think about how.

1. Look for ways to make other people _____.
2. Don't be a " _____."
3. Live under _____.
4. Make your _____ look good.
5. Character counts – do the _____ thing.
6. Come clean when you are _____.
7. Be _____.

Proverbs 29:2

When the righteous thrive, the people rejoice; when the wicked rule, the people groan.
